

- Given the above instances, where circles represent class +1 and squares represent another class (-1), use the general idea of support vector machines to draw the maximum margin hyperplane.
- Identify the support vectors.
- Write the equation that would be used to classify a new instance using the support vectors from (b). Indicate what constants in the equation would be determined by the geometry above.